The Campaign in New York.

SAN FRANCISCO, October 31.

A Chronicle New York special says: "The Republican State Committee are hard at work, and great confidence is expressed in the success of the State ticket. The differences between the Democratic factions, encourage them to think so. General Sharp says, assuring reports are coming in from all quarters of the State, prompting him to believe the Republicans will elect their whole ticket. The demand for Republican campaign documents is unprecedented."

BACK AGAIN.—"Kaiser," an old German who has been in the insane asylum at Reno for a year or more, is again back on the Comstock. His mental aberration is of a harmless type. He goes uneasily about, gestulating excitedly and muttering to himself. He is a baker by trade. He came to the Comstock many years ago, and at first worked in a bakery. Those intimately acquainted with him say he was then much the same as at present. The old gentleman feels that he has been greatly wronged. Had he his rights—as he understands them—he would to-day warm the throne of Germany in place of Emperor William.—[Editorial.]

WILL NOT BE CONFIRMED.—Van Fleet and Robbins, lately appointed by the Governor as State Prison Directors, will not be confirmed by the Senate. That imbecile body would not confirm Stanford, who had provided for half a million to the State University, as Regent, because he was a Republican, and hence to be consistent they must reject the gentlemen named.—S. F. Spirit of the Times.

IRRIGATION.

A Correspondent With Good Ideas on the Subject.

Antelope Valley, Oct. 24th, 1883.
EDITOR, APPEAL.—I have been traveling the last few days through Mason, Smith and Antelope valleys, and the whole region of country is under the hands of men who are doing what they can to bring Nevada to the front. In Mason Valley the farmers are making some complaint about lack of water and in listening to them I am led to the thought that if all those without water would go up to, or near the head waters of the Walker river, and make proper provisions for the careful husbanding of the water, when it is plenty, it would be far more satisfactory to all concerned than to grow and complain that someone else is getting more than their share of the water. Smith Valley farmers make no complaint about water but fish at this time. A large number of cattle are dying with what is known as black-leg. In Antelope Valley I notice the most complete system of ditching and irrigation I have ever seen; it is on the ranch of Kirman and Riekey. The work is that of Hon. T. B. Bliskey under whose personal supervision the whole system is carried on, and reflects great credit on his energy and intelligence. As soon as the water is used by him it is carried into the river again and passed on down to those below who in turn use it and turn it on to their neighbors. Thus you see no water is wasted as is so often claimed; the facts are simply these as near as I can determine from pretty close observation. There is not a sufficient quantity of water during a dry season, such as the last season was, to cover the whole of these valleys, and as water is liable to be short any season, it would be well for the farmers of Mason Valley to pool their issues and, if necessary, get some State aid and adopt and carry out a system of water reservoirs at points where water can be caught at times when it is very plenty, with the view of dealing it out when the most need is felt. The sooner such a move is made the better for the State; if the State is over to come to the front as either an agricultural or stock raising State, something must be done under the enlightened policy of the Republican party. The question of internal improvements might be carried forward to a point where artesian wells could be sunk by the aid of the National Government, but should the Democratic party come into power her well known hostility to any such policy would forever remain a bar to any such move. Mark the prophecy: The time will come when all these valleys will be settled up with an intelligent, energetic and progressive people engaged in mining, farming and manufacturing.

IRRIGATION.

[Carson Appeal.]

In another column is an interesting letter from a Mason Valley correspondent on irrigation, and it contains many valuable suggestions. The plan of storing up water in the wet season and of turning what is used back into the streams is a good idea, but very seldom followed out. It is the rule in Nevada for each farmer to get all the water he can and some men are so hogish as to allow water to run to waste rather than see the next man down stream have any benefit from it. It is this foolish method of doing business which is at the bottom of most of the tedious and vexatious law suits over riparian rights; and the result is that the well to do farmers get into a row, and at the end of a few years two lawyers have raked in the material of both farms and the ranchers are left almost penniless. The plan of sinking artesian wells is the best idea of all, as it will furnish ranches with a perpetual supply of good water independent of the streams, which, as a rule, run dry in the summer. As far as we can learn there is no area of any considerable size in Nevada that will not yield plenty of water where artesian wells are sunk from twenty to thirty feet. All who have tried to have found water in abundance and of the very best quality. With the proper attention paid to this subject Nevada can be made an agricultural State, and a season of permanent prosperity inaugurated independent of the mining industry.

ANOTHER VOLUME ON MEXICO BY BANCROFT.

[S. F. Chronicle.]

The third volume of H. H. Bancroft's history of Mexico, which forms volume VI in the "History of the Pacific States," has just been issued. It begins with the opening of the seventeenth century, concludes the history of the reign of the viceroys and closes with an exhaustive summary of the state of commerce, agriculture, religion and society during the three hundred years from 1500 to 1800. The first half of the book can be dismissed with few words. The story of the rule of the viceroys is not interesting. It is a repetition, under different men, of the same features of arbitrary power, exercised generally with little judgment and small care for the rights of the governed. The annals of the period bristle with riot and turbulence; piracy abounded on all the coasts and some of the corsairs boldly landed and sacked towns and monasteries, despoiling the shrines of their sacred ornaments of silver and gold; there was no government worthy of the name, no provisions for the defense of the coasts, no measures for the preservation of health or the protection of property; much of the government rested with the Governors of the States, as it does to-day, and the major part of these were venal and exacting to an extraordinary degree.

The last eight chapters are interesting, as they contain a review of the industrial and administrative condition of Mexico from the opening of the sixteenth to the nineteenth century. In detail they consider the administrative and judicial systems, mines and mining; agriculture and manufactures; commerce; revenue and finance; the secular clergy; religious orders and society. In the last chapter the author gives a broad and comprehensive sketch of the influence of Spanish colonization in Mexico. He again comes to the defense of the conquerors, claiming that the great diminution in native population was due, not to the excessive cruelty of European task-masters, but to the diseases which followed the new civilization—smallpox, measles and probably syphilis; epidemics and famines added to the causes which at times almost depopulated large provinces. The Indian race he looks on as vastly inferior to the European, and the Spaniards were justified in assigning even the canine class to inferior municipal positions. While denied nearly all legal rights, Mr. Bancroft declares that their lot was more fortunate than that of the laborer in civilized Germany or England. Society was divided into two great classes—the nobles and the base—while there was an almost complete absence of the great middle class, which is the main factor in the prosperity and advancement of any country. The customs, manners and dress of the people, their family and social life, form the subject of the remainder of this chapter—the most attractive by style and treatment of any in the book. [A. L. Bancroft & Co. San Francisco.]

CONGRESS.—This body meets on Monday, December 3d. It will be a long session, lasting until June or July.—S. F. Spirit of the Times.
